1. I have attended a great many of these public meetings in recent years & it is painfully obvious that –

- Meetings are attended by a large by the same people grinding out their own agendas – obviously not interested in facts
- Too many participants suggesting they're representing the public – often this amounts to a public of 1 or 2
- Meetings provide a forum for many negative anti-establishment & emotional vitriolic attacks on any good faith efforts

2. In my opinion DOE officials need to do a better job addressing the fact that the nuclear deterrent is necessary & a fact of life for several more decades
- We cannot unilaterally disarm & rely on the generosity of others w/ our national security
- We must always be in the position to enforce peace, not beg for it.

3. We must do a better job of pointing out that our country is making a good faith effort to disarmament, demilitarizing, storage/disposal of material, etc. We have nothing to apologize for.

4. Perhaps, it's time to question the continuation of these meetings – Is the cost & effort really worth it?
